

HOUSING RESEARCH GROUP

Network for young housing researchers

join us to the next session- PERIPHERAL HOUSE

Many of present discussions relating to housing focus on the urban way of life – whether as living in the city or in the suburbia around it. Yet as a response to two decades of centralizing urban development, we would like to dedicate the next session to the development (and re-development) of residential areas in the periphery, and to the search after a beneficial link between the urban and the peripheral house. Therefore, the theme of next session is the PERIPHERAL HOUSE.

presentations:

Helle Nørgaard - MSc & Ph.D. Urban Geography
Tilflytning og bosætning i yderområderne

Maja de Neergaard - PhD fellow, Roskilde University
Rural Urbanism? About urbanites moving to the countryside

Silje Erøy Sollien - PhD fellow, School of Architecture KA
Changing contexts of centre and periphery: Transforming the Macuti house in Ilha de Moçambique

What are the differences and similarities between the rural and the urban way of life? And are they as different as they are made out to be?

What are the characteristics and potentials of peripheral living areas and their dwellings?

How do the inhabitants 'create' life in peripheral areas?

How to restructure the declining peripheral housing areas - in terms of both space and public life?

How to create housing conditions for keeping the residents and for inviting new residents? Who moves to there and why?

The purpose of our network is to create a forum for discussion of housing research between young researchers. The idea behind the network is to achieve a greater possibility for those, who are new within the field, to launch new angles on on-going discussions within the field and to initiate new discussions. At the same time we can use each other as sounding boards both in our daily work and at our meetings. We aim at having four meetings each year; each of them centred on a theme within the field of housing research. The meetings are based on presentations from the network participants and in some cases supplemented with a presentation from a more experienced researcher as a basis for a more general discussion on the subject. The group is financially supported by Center for Boligforskning, SBI.

Participation and presentation in our network group provide ECTS with the approval of your supervisor. Participation: 0.75 ECTS / presentation: 1.5 ECTS.
