welcome

On behalf of all the staff and students at Nottingham Trent University, and all the partner institutions hosting In this Place I would like to offer you a very warm welcome to Nottingham. I hope you have all had a safe journey and we look forward to the coming days together.

In this Place, might suggest a place stood here right now, a place we remember, the place over there or the place that is just becoming and forming. To a great extent place is defined by the people, actions and objects that inhabit a place, pass through it or as a result of the choices we make in it. These critical choices form the themes we will explore and share as individuals, collaborators, educators and institutions. The future we are becoming raises the essential platform to discuss what questions can or should we be asking that inform the choices we are making. This is apposed to the situation of survival that affects so many places as we speak.

We look forward to the opportunity over the coming days to explore and share the necessary dialogues that might help shape and direct us as we move and navigate through - In this Place.

Duncan Higgins
Professor of Visual Arts
Conference Chairman

Exhibition and Workshop

Publishing Rooms: The Cumulus Fanzine

 Location: Bonington Gallery, Bonington building, NTU, Dryden Street, NG1 4GG

Delegates not attending the General Assembly are invited to visit the current exhibition in Bonington Gallery. Titled 'Publishing Rooms', the exhibition offers new perspectives on our relationship with current publishing technology, broadcast, and the archiving of the results. Creators, brothers Andrew and Iain Foxall, together with curator Tom Godfrey, will give a tour of the exhibition and then create a fanzine that will reference the mornings outcome, drawing inspiration from In this Place.

"One of the aims of the exhibition is to inspire us to find 'non-dull' ways to disseminate information. In an attempt to prove the exhibitions aim, we will make a publication using gathered content from the mornings activities."
